Dear Prospective Employer

My name is Tim Primmer and I am an IT professional with 3 years on the job experience in software development: product support/technical support, product testing and product training (creating product training videos from conception to production).

I am currently in the job market looking to move into a team position in web application development whether as a programmer or a tester.

- I recently completed the University of Texas Austin Web Application Programming Bootcamp where I excelled in a variety of project work and became a mentor to other course participants.
- I have a C++ programming certification from Austin Community College.
- I have a GitHub, a portfolio, and I am currently taking Hacker Rank coding tests as I continue my job search.

I feel it is time for me to contribute to a software development effort as I have the skills and training and after doing so well at the UT Bootcamp, the confidence. I am open to any entry level role available that matches my skillset and where a personable, hard-working and dedicated employee is sought.

Thank you for your consideration,

Tim Primmer

Austin, TX.
